Here, you'll find the prison where he was held for corrupting the youth of Athens, and the Pnyx, the birthplace of democratic ideals. The view of the Acropolis from the hilltop is stunning. Personalise your exploration with our included

'Your Choice' experiences.

Option 1 – Morning experience: The Knights of St John and Medieval Rhodes

The excursion begins with a short walk from the ship to the entrance of the Old Town, where our local guide leads us through this UNESCO-listed town. The Old Town lies apart from the New Town, sealed like a medieval time capsule behind a double ring of high walls and a deep moat. Nowhere else in the Dodecanese boasts so many layers of architectural history, with ruins and relics of the classical, medieval, Ottoman, and Italian eras intertwined in a maze of twisting alleys. Entering through the D'Amboise Gate, we visit the Grand Master's Palace, the most imposing building of medieval Rhodes. The palace and 'The Street of the Knights,' built in the 14th century, have remained largely untouched by time. The Knights of Rhodes, also known as the Knights Hospitaller, where a Christian military order granted the island in 1309 by the Byzantine Empire. They fortified Rhodes to defend against Ottoman forces, establishing it as a cultural and trade centre. Despite their defeat by the Ottomans in 1522, their architectural legacy remains. It is one of the rare survivors of the medieval world, standing unscathed as a piece of the past.

Renowned as the most attractive village on Rhodes, the nearby ancient site boasts significant historical structures, including the Great Stoa, the Temple of Athena Lindia from the 4th century BCE, the ancient theatre, and the remnants of the Temple of Dionysus. The Acropolis, perched atop a sheer rock rising 115 meters above the sea, offers unparalleled views of the sea. Lindos itself is a medieval village built around the base of the steep rock leading to the Acropolis. As you wander through its narrow, winding streets, you will encounter traditionally built white stone houses adorned with decorated pebble stone floors. Many of these houses date back to the 15th and 16th centuries, providing a glimpse into the village's storied past. Historically, Lindos was a significant city-state in ancient Greece, founded by the Dorians in the 10th century BC. It became a major trading centre, flourishing during the Archaic period when its influence extended across the Mediterranean. Lindos is also linked to various myths and legends, including Cleobulus, one of the Seven Sages of Greece, who ruled the city. At Knossos, we explore their Palace, adorned with frescoes, shields, the Hall of the Royal Guard, the King's Chamber with its alabaster throne, and the Queen's Apartment. Originally built around 1900 BC, Knossos was rebuilt after earthquakes and catastrophes. The Minoan civilisation declined following the eruption of Santorini around 1600 BC, which caused widespread devastation across the Aegean. Despite subsequent rebuilding efforts, including the Palace's reconstruction, Knossos ultimately succumbed to fire around 1400 BC. Our guide illuminates the Minoans' cultural and technological achievements, offering insight into their religious practices, social structure, and economic prowess

Your tour includes a visit to the production area, wine cellars and bottling facilities. The experience concludes with a tasting of Cretan wines, accompanied by a mezze plate of local delicacies. Syros's capital, Ermoupolis, stands out with its grand architecture and prominent Orthodox church, contrasting beautifully with the nearby hilltop enclave of Ano Syros. The latter, a quintessential Cycladic village, features Roman Catholic monasteries and churches. This blend of influences – stemming from Venetian and Ottoman rule – has left a lasting imprint on the island's cultural and architectural heritage. The name 'Syros' is believed to derive from the ancient Greek term Syr or Syros, hinting at its mythological roots.
